COMB MOUNTAINS FOR BURIED GOLD

Seek Treasure Hidden a Century Ago.

Alamosa, Colo.—Two faded and crumbled parchments with indistinct lines and markings of trails have led searching parties into the Conejos mountains in quest of gold dust and ingots, believed buried more than a century ago.

The searching parties combed many sections of the mountains during the summer, but early winter snows have forced abandonment of the projects until next spring.

One of the bands of delvers after hidden treasure is known as the "Treasure company," with headquarters at Capulin, a Spanish settlement 20 miles south of here. The other is a partnership between Charles P. Graeser, rancher, and Jesse Reynolds, Denver prospector. The latter has spent the summer digging along Rock creek for chests of gold dust and ingots thought to have been buried in the '70s of the last century. Reynolds also is seeking an old Spanish mine, which he claims to have located on the west flank of the San Juan mountains.

Early day history, romance and tragedy mark the trails that lead to the reputed treasure sites. Legend says the treasure was concealed by French and Spanish mining expeditions while under attack by Indian tribes.

The tale of the Rock creek cache carries with it a story of vengeance wrought by Indians against an expeditionary force of Frenchmen. The leaders of the explorers, according to the account, kidnaped the daughter of an Indian chieftain and later deserted her. The white men previously had discovered a great deposit of almost virgin gold and were transporting it on burros to the gulf coast. The outraged Indians ambushed and massacred all of the party but one man, who buried the gold, the story runs.

Next War to Be Jolly; Guns Will Not Rust

Washington. — Some millions of Americans with vivid recollections of wartime troubles in keeping rust off their rifles, machine guns and "75's" will be interested to learn that future American armies probably won't have the same kind of chores to do.

In his annual report, made public recently, Maj. Gen. Clarence C. Williams, chief of army ordnance, states that efforts are being made to substitute rust-proof steel for the present metal parts in army fighting equipment.

"Extensive investigation of commercial stainless steel for use in rifles, machine gun barrels and other components is being carried on with the object of eventually making as many components of this type of material as practicable," says General Williams. "Such use, if perfected, would result in far-reaching economy."

To Install Restaurants on Swedish Airplanes

Stockholm.—Restaurant service is to be installed next season on the airplanes of the Malmo-Amsterdam route of Aerotransport, the well-known Swedish air line. Great activity is expected in 1928 on account of the Olympic games in Amsterdam. Many machines will be held in reserve to take care of the anticipated heavy traffic.

Great progress in flying has been made during the last year both in regard to miles traveled and passengers carried, as well as in the increased safety of the planes. Considerable quantities of freight have also been transported.

As an example of the efficient role which Swedish flying plays in the European air lines can be mentioned the fact that London newspapers may now be sold and read in Stockholm at 8:30 in the morning the day after their publication.

German Stage Filled by Employment Bureau

Berlin.—All theatrical contracts for employment of actors and actresses must be made after January 1 through the German national employment bureau.

Theatrical agencies have been held to come within the scope of a movement under which all private employment agencies will be nationalized by December 31, to be maintained three after free from public taxes and to charge no fee for services.

Premier Lays World War to Feminists

Budapest.—The feminist movement was blamed in the Hungarian parliament for the World war, Count Bethlen, the premier said that had the French people kept pace with other countries it is probable the war could have been avoided. He declared that the feminist movement, "by undermining family life and establishing the one child principle," had enfeebled all countries.

"The newspapers and the stage," he said, "glorify free love. Modern woman is an article of luxury, the whole modern life is a death dance."

Women's Voice Stronger

Talking itres men, but doesn't women, a scientist tells us. The vocal cords of women are shorter than those of men and less energy is required to produce a sound. Besides women are more sociable and would rather talk than eat, much as they like to eat.

FROM NUMBERS, B. C., TO THE U. S. CENSUS

First Counting of Noses Was Done by Moses.

Washington.—All Turkey stayed at home one Friday recently while 50,000 officials took the first census of the Ottoman empire.

"Turkey has made up for tardiness by asking questions far more thorough than appear in the famous first census of history," says a bulletin from the Washington headquarters of the National Geographic society.

"Take ye the sum of all the congregation of the children of Israel, after their families, by the house of their fathers, with the number of their names every male by their polls; from twenty years old and upward, all that are able to go forth to war in Israel.'

"Thus spoke the Lord to Moses, and Moses, with Aaron's assistance, collected the figures for the first census report, which may be found in practically every home and hotel room. It is appropriately entitled 'Numbers,' the fourth book of the Bible.

"By its breadth of scope the census William of Normandy ordered for his new kingdom of England, resembles modern surveys. He commanded his minions in 1085 A. D. to record every lord and peasant, every acre, every ox, every mill, every manor, every weir and every plow, the value thereof and—this is forward looking—the natural resources, woods, fields and streams capable of development and revenue. The report to William the Conqueror became the Domesday Book, unreadable today except by scholars, yet protected in the public record office at London as one of the most precious possessions of England.

Russia's First Count in 1897.

"The United States, although a newcomer in the ranks of civilization, was one of the first nations to establish the modern periodic census. Sweden took the lead before our first census in 1700, but England, France and Prussia did not see the necessity of regular counting of noses until ten or twenty years later. Russia took no census until 1897.

"Deeply religious settlers of America nearly upset our first census when they barked back to another less fortunate Bible census. 'Satan stood up against Israel,' our ancestors pointed out to the marshals, 'and provoked David to number Israel from Beersheba even to Dan.' What happened? 'God was displeased; therefore he smote Israel. The Lord sent pestilence upon Israel; and there fell of Israel 70,000 men.'

"Fears that our first census would bring similar destruction upon the nation did not materialize, so the marshals delivered their reports to President Washington within nine months for all the original states, except Vermont, Rhode Island and South Carolina. Vermont and Rhode Island entered the Union later. The marshal of South Carolina found workers scarce at 31 per 100 heads counted.

"Today a visitor at the census bureau may see the names of famous Americans and the answers given to the first census inkers' simple questionnaires. John Hancock's family consisted of two 'free white males of sixteen and upward,' three white females, seven other persons (servants to doubt) and no slaves. Progress in 70 years presents a contrast with data for Abraham Lincoln collected in 1890: 'Age, fifty-one, married, lawyer, value of real estate $5,000—personal estate $12,000, Kentucky, place of birth.'

"From one census every ten years the census bureau has increased to 104 censuses, in addition to many special surveys such as that made to supply data to congress for immigration quotas. One census collected every week shows the number of babies born. Using these figures the bureau sets up its large calculator at an exhibit and every 20 seconds announces to the world that the millions of Americans has been increased, for example, by baby No. 118,072,231.

Statistics About Buying.

"Not content with counting men, women and children, where they work, whether they are in school and if so, how long; not satisfied with tabulating the value of wheat grown and tons of manganese ore dug out of the ground; not resting even with summing up the business of hats and hammocks, shoes and sulphuric acid manufactured in the United States, the census bureau proposes to 'complete the picture.' To finish the portrait in figures of the whole United States, it is necessary, they say, to have a census of distribution. That means an accounting of what is sold to the housewife over the grocery, drug and meat counters, and of what the wholesaler sells to the retailer.

"Recently the census bureau released its first experimental distribution survey for which Baltimore served as a laboratory specimen. The weavers of figures found that in Baltimore 288 people are required to support one neighborhood grocery; that Baltimoreans spend $456.72 per year in stores; that the department stores take the most; that Baltimore spends more on automobiles than on furnishing its homes and that in the average family purchasing budget food requires 31 per cent, clothing 20 per cent and the family automobile comes next with 9 per cent. The same survey has been extended to ten other cities: Chicago Atlanta, Denver, Fargo, N. D.; Kansas City, Providence, San Francisco, Seattle, Springfield, Ill., and Syracuse, N. Y. Some day it will be extended to the whole nation."

Made Music for Hebrews

A psaltery was a stringed instrument shaped like the Greek letter delta. It was used by the ancient Hebrews. In medieval times a psaltery had from 13 to 36 strings and a sounding board. It was played by plucking the strings with or without a plectrum.

BURY LUNCH FOR PREHISTORIC DOG

Indians' Custom Revealed in Finding of Bones.

Washington.—Discovery of two deer bones painted red is a bit of evidence that Indians who lived in America 2,500 years ago placed food in the graves of pet dogs so that they would have bones for their journey in the next world. The deer bones were found beside the skeletons of two prehistoric dogs by Dr. F. H. H. Roberts, Jr., of the bureau of American ethnology, who has just returned from an archeological expedition to Chaco canyon, N. M.

The dogs appear to have been buried with ceremony by the Indians, said Doctor Roberts in discussing his expedition. Whether the dry bones were painted red to fool the dog spirits into thinking there was good meat on the bones can only be conjectured.

The dogs belonged to Indians of the last days of the basketmaker civilization that flourished in the Southwest many centuries before the Pueblos, he said. Very ancient trifles are known as the basketmakers because they wove all their vessels and containers. In the course of centuries pottery-making was learned.

Definite evidence of the Indians who lived at the time when the change from baskets to pottery was made was discovered by Doctor Roberts. Fifteen skeletons were found in two layers of earth. The burials in the lower level had no bows or containers for food, such as have been found in similar burials. The baskets here had evidently fallen apart and disintegrated from exposure before time covered them with earth. But in the layer of earth above them were bodies accompanied by crude clay jars and bowls.

These skeletons of the transition period are of great interest to ethnologists who are studying the types of Indians who inhabited America in the days before the time of Christ.

Complete pieces of four bowls which could be patched together, even after so many centuries, were found by Doctor Roberts, as well as quantities of fragments of the rough, coarse clay containers made by the first artisans of the region who tried the potter's trade.

High Shoes for London Girls Are Coming Back

London.—High shoes reaching half way up the calf and reminiscent of styles worn by our grandmothers a few years ago will be the vogue this year with English girls, judging from the exhibitions at the shoe and leather fair which was held here.

The models shown were plain in style and had none of the swashbuckling finery of Russian boots. It is predicted that black and brown shades will be worn by the business girls, while the ultra-fashionable women will prefer scarlet boots and three-inch heels or opalescent kid boots radiant with every color of the rainbow.

It was evident at the exhibit that lizard skin will continue to be a popular trimming for shoes this winter.

Storm Center Shoves Barometer Far Down

Port Townsend, Wash.—The birthplace of storms north of the Aleutian Islands is hard on barometers, reports Capt. Y. Kawashima of the Yokohama Maru on arrival here. Ships passing through the storm nursery he noted the lowest barometer reading ever observed on the Pacific, the indicator showing 28.37.

The vessel experienced no rough weather, but the Japanese navigator believes he just missed a typhoon or monsoon. Most of the severe storms that sweep the Mississippi valley originate in the Aleutian area, where varied currents of ocean water influence the atmospheric conditions.

Clever Chinese

New York.—Clever, these Chinese! A detective arrested a dozen when he found them in a room with money on the table. One explained to the judge in excellent English that they were taking up a collection to buy a book on cross-word puzzles. They were freed.

Deer's Appetites Ruin Golf Course Greens

Girard, Calif.—The Girard golf club is probably the only golf club in the world that finds itself up against a serious problem in hiring a caretaker to shoo wild animals off the greens.

The links border on several dark canyons that run back into the Santa Monica mountains, where bands of wild deer browse. Nobody has shot at these deer in so long that they are more or less tame. At night when the golf players go home to explain to their wives that they have been in their offices all day the deer come out of the canyons, nibble the rich grass and eat up everything else green that is in sight.

Recent fires in Topanga canyon have destroyed the wild herbage. As a result most of the deer are now "boarding" on the golf club greens. Officers of the club say a man or boy with a lantern will be hired to keep the deer on the run after nightfall.

Beginning Early

Milton, aged seven, was fishing with his father. Evidently he had on former occasions been impressed with some of the angling yarns told by his parent, for, when returning home empty-handed, he said: "Say, dad, how many fish shall we tell mother got away?"

In Remembrance

In loving remembrance of our precious darling little girl, Frances Clare Akers, who departed this life twelve months ago today December 21, 1926.

We had a little treasure once, She was our joy and pride, We loved her, oh, perhaps too well,

For soon she slept and died,

Some may think we have forgotten you dear Frances,

But through on earth you are no more, But in memory you are with us, As you always were before

All is dark within our dwelling, Lonely are our hearts today,

For the one we loved so dearly, Has forever passed away.

Our Darling was a little flower of love,

That blossomed but to die,

Transplanted now in Heaven above;

To bloom with God on high.

Father, Mother and Sisters.

Appomattox Parent Teachers Meet

The regular monthly meeting of the Parent Teacher's Association was held last Friday at school auditorium, with Mrs. A. H. Irby, vice-president, presiding. The chief feature of the business meeting was the election of president to fill the unexpired term of Mrs. N. A. Wagers, who had resigned. The Association was quite fortunate in the election of Mrs. Florence Carson to this office. Miss Eddie Hardy, delegate to the State Association at Richmond, then read her report, which contained beneficial suggestions and showed great enthusiasm gained at the Richmond meeting. The report included and emphasized the seven objectives for which all parent teacher's associations stand:

Organization, Extension, Public Welfare, Education, Home Service, Health, Publicity. A short program was then rendered in which several members took part. The general theme being "Facts concerning Child Labor". Rev. W. M. Thompson, Baptist pastor, gave a most worth-while talk against "commercializing child labor".

The meeting was closed with singing "Our Battle-Hymn for Children", one of the songs of the National Congress of parents and teachers.
